

East-the-Water

Correlation of census records for the period 1841-1901 – Torrington Street, Torridge Place, Torrington Lane, Nuttaberry and Gasworks areas

Notes

Last revised 13 August 2018

Due to numerous changes in street layout and house numbering it can be very difficult to follow an individual property in East-the-Water back through the census records. It is often only possible once you consider the locations of families at a street level, rather than a house level, then compare this with properties on the ground and information from other sources, such as deeds, plans, and trade journals. This document is intended as a finding aid to help locate who was where and which modern properties were associated with which families. All details have been transcribed from original images, but, as it is not intended as a replacement for the full census records, only heads of families are included in this document (except where further detail is useful for correlation) and places of birth have been deliberately omitted. Genealogists and those researching their house history should consult the further details, including places of birth and details for others on the premises, that are available on the full census records. These are available via the better online genealogy services, such as Ancestry, whilst transcripts of the Bideford census records are held by Bideford Archive.

Where distinct correlations appear to exist, then these have been highlighted in colour. Where no distinct correlations tie together the dwelling sequences, then the alignments must be considered hypothetical. As further details become available it will hopefully be possible to refine these alignments.

House numbering has clearly altered on occasions, as have the street names, and their layout.

The 1901 & 1911 details are only complete for the roads nearest to the riverside (Torrington Street, Torridge Place, and the Nuttaberry/Gas Works group of cottages).

The 1901 Census lacks house numbers, so the numbers shown are the enumerators item numbers. There is also evidence that the enumerator did not work methodically in some streets, e.g. Torrington Street, making them impossible to align in this period without further evidence from third parties. Where an individual is clearly the same one mentioned on the 1891 census then they have been added in the same place as on the 1891 census. Transcription of the 1901 Census is also incomplete

Transcription of the 1891 census is incomplete and some areas, such as Railway Terrace, Railway Cottages, Grenville Terrace and Sunnyside have yet to be added.
